Welcome from your Officer Team

Dear Programme Rep,

We would like to congratulate, but most of all thank you for taking up the responsibility of becoming a Programme Representative. It is a great initiative to be the one that will be the voice of your programme. As a team we want to ensure that students satisfaction is kept high at all times, however this would be impossible without the contribution and hard work the programme reps undertake every year. Thanks to you, the Sabbatical team has a bridge from our offices to all programmes throughout our institution.

In the past academic year the students of University of East London elected us to be the front line of students representation. Not only to be your voice, but also to be the change or defence UEL students might need. It is the Students' Union responsibility to ensure you have all the support needed and we promise we will do so with training sessions and workshops to provide you the guidance needed for you to fulfil your role.

Take good care of your handbook, your course and classmates and collect your signatures in order to receive an award at the end of the academic year. At University of East London Students' Union we award hard working students and with this experience you will not only have a great certificate to add to your CV, but also make friends, receive training for free that will enrich your qualities to become true leaders.

Enjoy your time as a Programme Rep and never hesitate to contact us if you got any questions, doubts or ideas. We are here to serve you, our students. United we can achieve a lot. Stand by us and we will stand by you.

Best wishes,

Officer Team 2014/15

Message from the Vice-Chancellor

On behalf of the University, thank you for choosing to take on this important role as a programme representative.

Everyone at UEL is committed to providing a truly life-changing experience for our students, and to continually improve the opportunities and facilities we provide. But we can only do this with your help. As programme reps, you can ensure that your experiences, and those of your friends, classmates and peers, contribute to the feedback that informs our future direction.

By becoming more actively involved in the student representation system you will also learn more about what the university already provides outside the classroom – from sports coaching to employability and enterprise support to opportunities for international travel – and let us know how we can make it better suited to the needs of our students.

From the finest sports centre in London to 24/7 library access on both Stratford and Docklands campuses, not to mention a brand new campus at University Square

Stratford, we are justifiably proud of what UEL has to offer. Your support and involvement will ensure we can keep improving and continue to offer a full and rounded student experience that gives all students the opportunity to thrive.

I wish you the very best of luck in your position as a programme rep, and please do say hello when you see me around campus, and let me know how things are going for you.

Best wishes,

Professor John J Joughin
Vice-Chancellor
University of East London

Introduction to Programme Representation

One of the fundamental functions of a Students' Union is the representation of students. An effective Programme Representatives system can be one of the most successful ways of achieving this. Programme Representatives (Reps) are one of the main vehicles by which students can have a measure of control over their own learning experience.

Programme Representation can be defined as giving students a voice to influence institutional policy and resource decision making processes and provides an accountable system for channeling student views.

Why is Programme Representation important?

Student views are lodged firmly in the University's decision-making processes (ie. where policy is decided and resources are distributed). It promotes the idea of a University culture of partnership between various stakeholders (UEL staff, Programme Reps and UELSU) and all these should be working together to enhance the quality of the total student experience.

It provides students with the opportunity to provide critical commentary on their total student experience.

The system acts as an opportunity to provide ongoing feedback and gives students a level of ownership in relation to their education.

The system ensures the collection of students' views to build up a comprehensive view over time and is interactive, pro-active, innovative and thought-provoking.

Programme Reps can provide consistent well-informed opinions about the quality of teaching and learning, and the student experience in general.

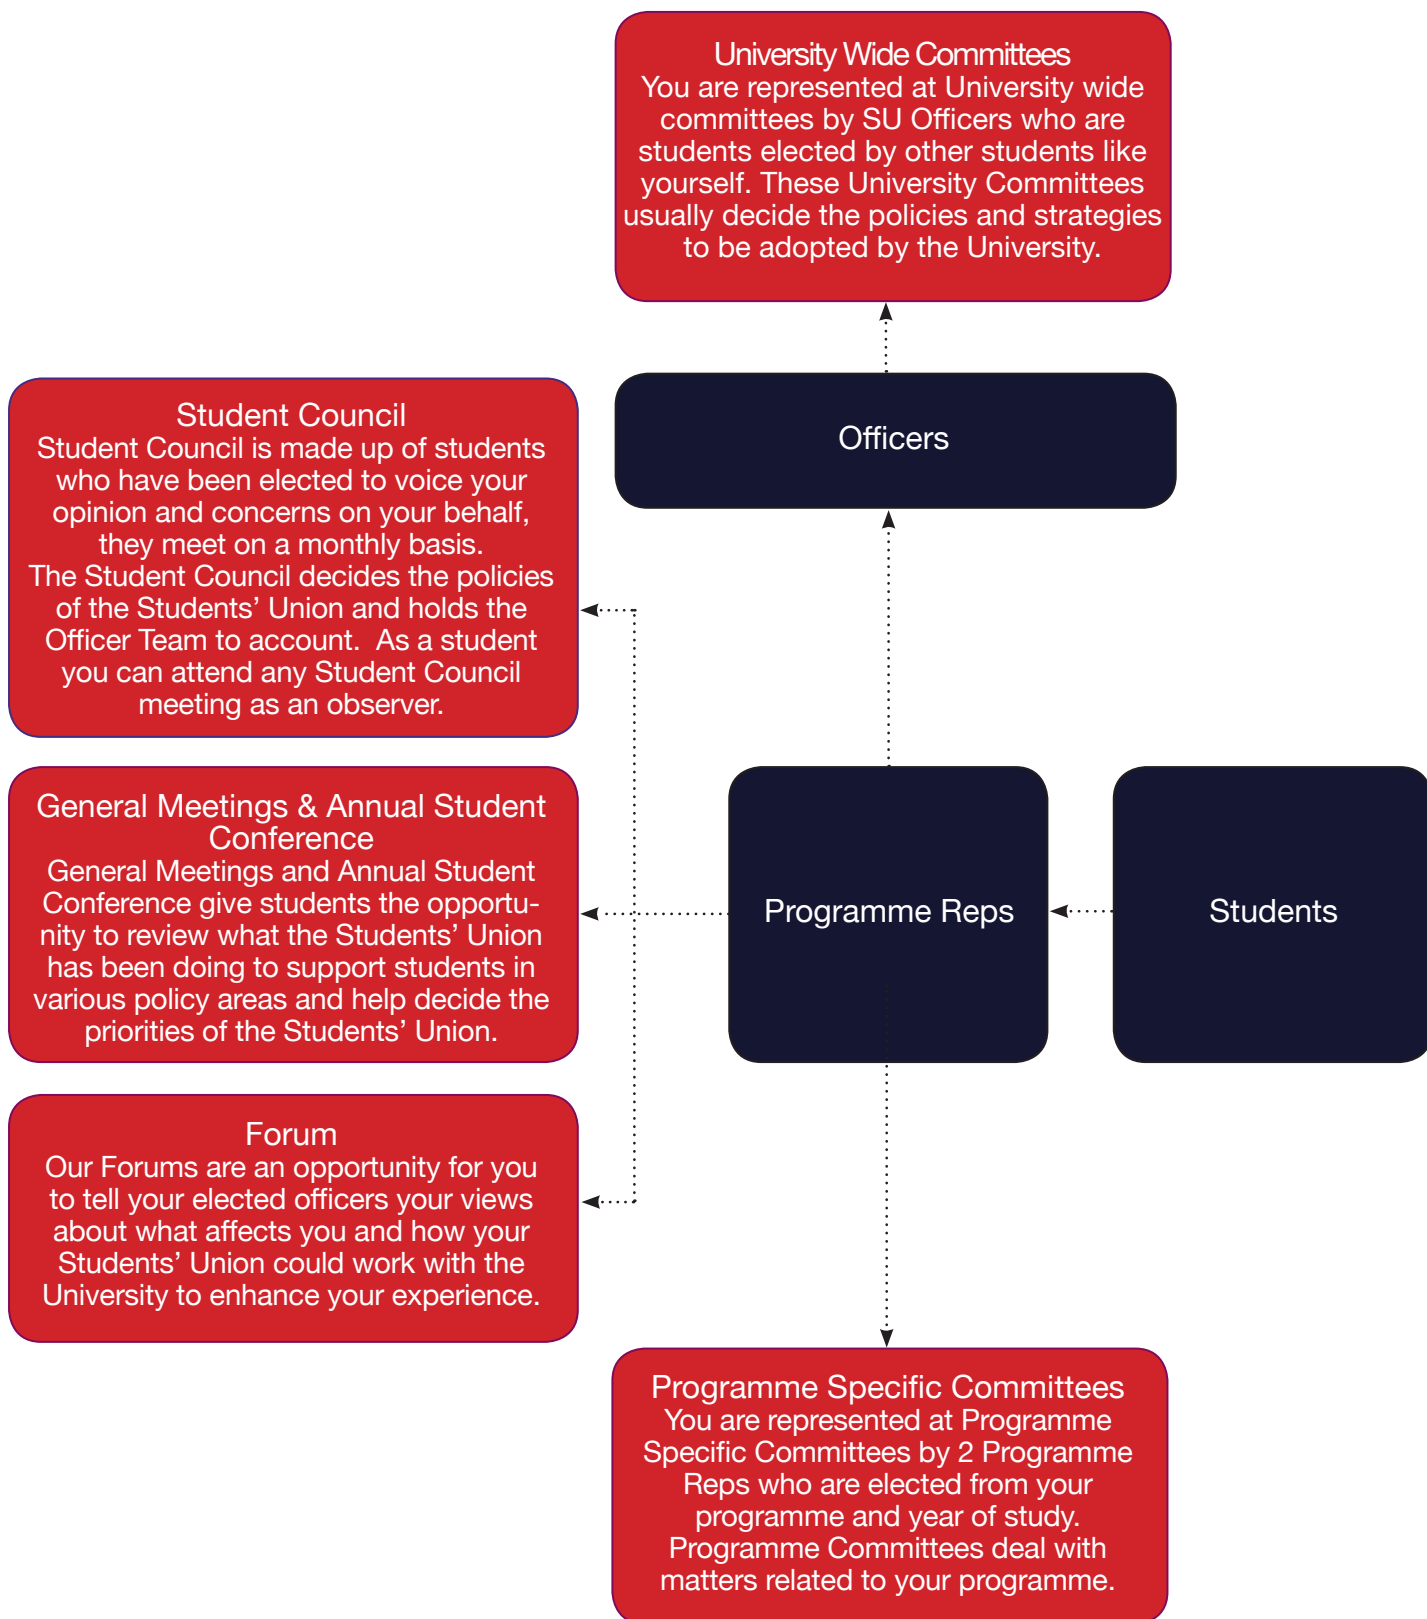

Universities need to ensure that they continue to offer high quality programmes, and the involvement of Programme Reps is vital in achieving this goal. Programme Reps can provide staff with information about how their programmes can be effectively improved. They can also support staff in their bid to introduce new teaching and learning projects.

Which committees have Programme Representation?

There are places for students on the following School-based Committees: School Board, School Quality Standing Committee, School Learning & Teaching Committee, Programme Committees.

Programme Committees are accountable to the relevant School Board, which in turn is accountable to Academic Board. For more information see page 20.

Diane Griffiths - BA (Hons)
Education Studies

"Becoming a programme representative has been considerably rewarding. It gave me the opportunity to not only develop my confidence and communication skills, but to network with my fellow students whilst giving them a voice in matters that affected their programme of study. By completing the training and interacting with the friendly UELSU team who were always available to support me in this role, I was fortunate enough to receive two programme representative awards, which gave me a huge sense of achievement too."

Role of your Programme Leader

The University has given your programme leader responsibility of supporting student representation in your programme.

This entails:

1. Ensuring that programme representatives are elected.
2. Making your contact details and photographs (optional) as a Programme Representative available to other students via display either on School notice boards or Moodle.
3. Helping you to meet with students on your programme to canvas views or provide feedback; this would include helping you in booking a room to allow you to hold a drop-in/clinic session prior to the programme committee.
4. Allowing you access to University channels of communication including notice boards.
5. Chairing programme committee meetings
6. Ensuring that dates of meetings and minutes of the meetings are publicised to you.
7. Ensuring that changes made as a result of student feedback are communicated to you
8. Being available to discuss and negotiate a solution to issues arising from programme committee meeting to achieve an earlier resolution.

Top Tip

"Do not try and take on too much - have one or two goals and pursue those."

Effective Communication

Some students do not communicate with their Programme Reps because they don't understand what a Rep does. You will need to explain that students can approach you with positive and negative issues about the programme they are taking and that you will pass the information onto the Programme Leader so they can enhance your learning experience now as well as improving the programme for future years.

How should I communicate with classmates?

Some suggestions are listed below:

Your contact details and photograph (optional) should be displayed either on School notice boards or Moodle so that students can contact you. You'll need to liaise with the School Office (Programme Administrator) to ensure contact details of all Programme Reps are displayed. The School is responsible for also displaying dates of meetings, minutes of the previous meeting and changes made as a result of student feedback on notice boards.

Ask your Programme Leader to liaise with the Module Leader(s) to give you some time at the start or the end of core lectures and seminars so you can explain to students how they can contact you to discuss any issues (especially for Programme Committees) or if they will give you 15 minutes at the end of class for students to have a meeting.

Speak to students during breaks, or before and after class to discuss any issues they may have with the Programme. It may also be helpful to discuss the agenda of the next Programme Committee, so you can discuss the items that the department want to raise as well as the issues that the students want to raise.

At the beginning of a core lecture or seminar give everyone a small sheet of paper and ask them to write one thing they think is going well and one thing that could be going better about the programme.

Some Programme Reps hold a drop-in/clinic session prior to their Programme Committee. You will need to ask your Programme Leader to book a room so students can drop in to discuss issues with Programme Reps. These may be more successful if they are well publicised and held before or after a core lecture.

You can ask your Programme Leader to liaise with a Module Leader so you can use Moodle and discussions forums. It would be helpful to post a notice or e-mail students, prior to Programme Committees, asking for issues they would like to see discussed.

Effective Communication

Programme Reps must be able to represent the views of the student group. You should seek the support of your Programme Leader to help find opportunities to seek the views of others on the programme. The best thing you can do is try and meet with other Programme Reps on the committee and work as a team.

What are the types of issues that Programme Reps deal with?

The main responsibility of a Programme Rep is raising the concerns of the student body which are directly related to the academic nature of your programme. The most useful comments that you can make as a Programme Rep are about the issues on your course which the teaching staff have the power and ability to change. A few examples are cited below:

Module Deadlines - lecturers changing them without consulting the students and then penalising them if they do not meet the deadline.

Lecture Rooms - rooms not large enough to accommodate the cohort.

Reading Lists - some lecturers may not submit their reading lists to the library for new acquisitions.
Hidden Programme Costs - e.g. students being charged for module handbooks when they shouldn't.

Turn around of marked work - students requesting assignments to be marked and returned before the following assignment is handed in to enable them to make use of the tutor's comments.

Other issues include: cancelled lectures, late lecturers, unavailability of past exam papers, limited access to lab equipment/computers, problems with tutors, teaching methods, assessment methods, resources for studying, workloads etc.

Top Tip

“Make sure that you ask the students what they want and that when a meeting is coming up, you go around and ask the students on your course what they want to see happen. Otherwise, you aren't doing your job.”

Issues Programme Reps should NOT deal with

There are some issues that Programme Reps should not deal with, and if students approach you about these issues you should direct them to the UELSU Advice and Information Service and/or UEL Student Support as appropriate.

- Formal procedures e.g. academic appeals, individual complaints, extenuation, disciplinary hearings.
- Financial and funding queries.
- Welfare problems, health and personal issues e.g. council tax or visa problems.
- Disputes between individual students and academic staff.

These sorts of issues can be complex, time consuming and require expertise, so don't feel bad about referring someone to UELSU Academic Advice Service or UEL Student Services. With regards to complex casework, the UELSU Academic Advice Service staff are qualified to deal with this type of enquiry so make the most of their experience and knowledge.

Tanya Belcheva - BA (Hons) International Tourism Management

“As an active Programme Representative, I am trying to act as a liaison between peers and members of staff and give a voice to the students' opinion and views about their experience in the University. Part of the Rep duties is to ensure the quality of the programmes and attend the Committee Meetings, as well as representing students. As a Programme Rep you develop the most important soft skills that recruiters are looking for such as communication, team work, networking and time management, but you also build a relationship with both students and the University staff.”

How do I help other students?

Imagine the following scenario; there are students complaining about overcrowded rooms, inadequate lectures, expensive handouts and a slow turnaround of work. To whom should they turn? The first step might be to go to the Programme Rep - someone they know on their programme and who is sharing their experience. As students begin to recognise you as their Programme Rep, individual students who want you to help solve their problems will probably approach you. One key thing to bear in mind is confidentiality; always treat what a student tells you as confidential. If you are going to take any action or discuss the matter elsewhere, get their agreement first.

There are several ways of dealing with individuals' problems and concerns, which may need to be dealt with urgently, particularly if there are problems or issues arising in between Programme Committees.

Talk to a staff member - most of the problems students will approach you with (eg. timetable, overcrowding, late return of essays etc) should first be reported to your Module Leader or Programme Leader. You may want an earlier resolution and should be able to discuss issues and negotiate a solution. Informal routes of negotiation can sometimes be the most successful: try and resolve problems at the lowest level. You can also talk to other Programme Reps to see if the issue has been resolved in another year or subject area.

Putting the issue on an agenda - you may be advised to discuss an issue at the Programme Committee, or there may be recurring problems that you need some guidance on or a firm policy decision made. You will need to contact the Programme Administrator to put items on the agenda of a Programme Committee.

Seek advice from others - if an issue cannot be resolved to your satisfaction, or you are unsure about anything, then contact the Students' Union (UELSU). We will help you with your concerns. If students consult you on any of the following areas which are outside your remit (see issues that Programme Reps should not deal with) then you must refer them to UELSU, UELSU Academic Advice Service and/or UEL Student Support Helpdesk as appropriate.

Please remember that the academic staff and UELSU are there to help and support you.

For advice, support and information concerning Programme Representation please e-mail: progreprs@uel.ac.uk

The UEL Student Charter

It is important that you are familiar with the UEL Student Charter and what it means for students. The Student Charter is available at:

www.uel.ac.uk/studentcharter

How do I help other students?

Issue Decision Tree

When confronted with a situation please consider the questions below and then work your way through the Issue Decision Tree so as to resolve it.

·Do you have an issue?
 How you present an issue is vital to how effectively it is resolved; the more detail the better.

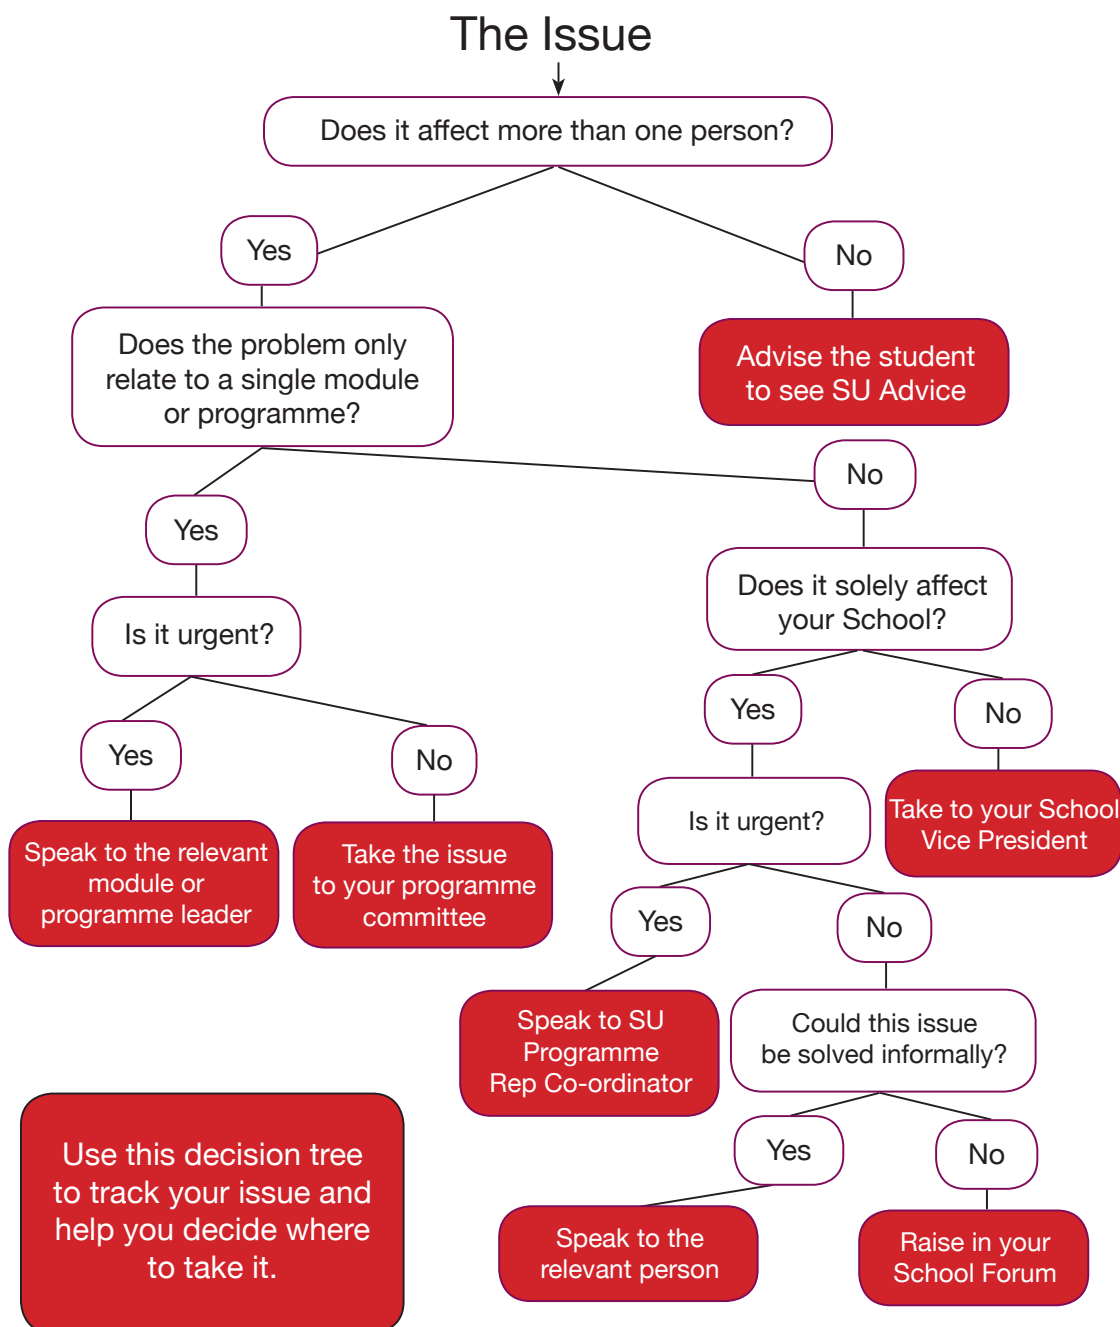

How were you made aware of this issue?
 Has a complaint been made? Have you been approached by students?

·Why is this an issue?
 Does it affect teaching quality? Does it impact on the student's ability to learn?

·Where is this issue?
 Does the issue affect one module/one programme/ the year group/the whole School?

·Who does the issue affect?
 Does the issue affect undergraduate or taught/ research postgraduates, males or females, home or international students, mature students, campus-based students, distance learners?

·When is it an issue?
 Does the issue only become a problem during lectures/seminars, when it relates to examinations/ assessed work, a particular tutor, a particular area of work?

Programme Committees Part 1

As a Programme Rep, a major part of your work will involve attending Programme Committees. For some of you it may be the first time you are attending formal meetings of this nature. Remember you are not on the committee as an individual but are representing other students.

If you require more background information or clarification, you can arrange a meeting with other members of your Programme Committee, you can also talk to other Programme Reps on your programme and try to get hold of minutes of past meetings (from the Programme Administrator).

Some Programme Reps may be worried that they will not be taken seriously, or that if they are outspoken this may be held against them and their academic work may suffer as a result. It is important to remember that most staff respect and support Programme Representation, and don't expect you to know the details of every issue.

Preparing for meetings

Always check the time, date and venue of the meeting. Make sure you know exactly where the room is prior to the meeting. If you are unable to attend a meeting, you must send your apologies to the Chair.

Find out how often the Programme Committee meets

Find out how you can put items onto the agenda if there is something in particular you wish to discuss that has been raised by students. There is usually a deadline for agenda items. The Chair (this is usually the Programme Leader) should be able to advise you of this.

Inform other students of the date of the meeting to collect feedback and issues for discussion at the meeting. You should receive the papers for the meeting a couple of days beforehand, if not arrange to collect them. Consult as widely as possible with other students about issues on the agenda.

Read the papers - is there any terminology that you don't understand or issues you need clarification on? You can share or divide up the reading of papers with the other Programme Reps attending the meeting.

Note down any points you want to raise, in advance of the meeting. It is a good idea to meet with other Programme Reps attending the meeting, prior to the meeting itself. This will help you manage issues as they arise.

Agenda

Agendas can differ between meetings, but most will include the following.

Apologies - if you are unable to attend a meeting, you must send apologies to the Chair in advance.

Chair's action - the Chair may have acted on behalf of the committee during the period between meetings, and they will ask for endorsement.

Minutes of the previous meeting - any comments on the factual accuracy are requested, if there aren't any then the minutes are confirmed as an accurate record.

Matters arising/update on actions - progress on actions is noted. Try to ensure that these remain on the minutes if not completed.

Reports - this normally constitutes the main bulk of the agenda. If you submit a paper for discussion, you will present it here. The annual monitoring report (Review and Enhancement report - REP) and the External Examiner report should be approved by the Programme Committee and progress on the action plan should be monitored at each meeting.

Student Issues - there should be an item for discussion of student issues on the programme, if not request one. This should also include feedback on student surveys e.g. Module Evaluation Questionnaires, National Student Survey, UEL Student Satisfaction etc. UEL also publishes a newsletter providing feedback on the UEL Student Satisfaction Survey and National Student Survey, and also "You said, we did" posters in response to student feedback.

Any Other Business (AOB) - if you need to discuss an important issue which did not get put on the agenda, you may be able to raise it here.

A model agenda is provided page 17. It is not intended to be exclusive or exhaustive.

Programme Committees Part 2

In the meeting

Wear what you feel comfortable in; Programme Committees are usually fairly informal.

Arrive on time, so you don't miss anything important.

Try and sit where you can attract attention of the chair if you want to make a contribution.

Listen to the discussion.

Address your comments to the Chair rather than individuals (this might not be necessary in informal meetings), and be concise!

If you are asked for the student view on an issue, don't feel that you have to give a definite response. You have the right to ask for time to consult students on your programme.

If you have any doubts, ask for clarification from the Chair.

At the end of the meeting, ask the Chair to summarise all the actions that need to be carried out.

Note any actions required of you with deadlines.

After the meeting

Discuss with other Programme Reps how the meeting has gone and take on board any agreed actions.

Report back to students about the decisions that affect them, and the responses to any issues you may have raised. You should be able to feedback actions to students at the end of lectures or through Moodle or School notice boards.

You may also need to collect student feedback on a particular issue to take to the next meeting. Report back to your School Reps and Vice-President of your school.

Programme Committees Part 3

COMMON CONCERNS

1. The meetings can be intimidating

You may be less experienced than other members of the meetings.

The best thing you can do is try to meet with other Programme Reps on the committee and work as a team. Listen and take notes in the meeting (note responses to issues you have raised or any actions you are asked to undertake). Don't be afraid to ask for help from your Programme Leader and/or the Students' Union. The weekly newspaper The Times Higher Education Supplement is a good way of getting up to date with current issues in Higher Education.

2. A lack of background information

The Chair, other more experienced Programme Reps and UELSU can give you a general briefing but you can often begin a meeting with less information and background knowledge than the rest of the committee. It might feel a little daunting to ask for information or clarification because this highlights a lack of knowledge. You might have to come to terms with issues which began before you joined the committee, and which might not get resolved before you leave.

Try and arrange a meeting with other members of your Programme Committee to find out what the main issues have been historically. You can also chat to previous Programme Reps on your programme or try and get hold of past minutes.

3. People think that I'm complaining

Members of the Programme Committee will think I'm always complaining.

The Programme Reps system is well understood by staff who realise that you, as a Programme Rep, are raising the concerns of the programme group (students). It is only by raising the concerns of the group that you will be able to make a difference to their learning experience.

4. Attitudes towards Programme Reps

You may feel you will not get taken seriously because of your age or experience. You may feel unsure whether your points are being taken on board, or be afraid that you will be perceived as outspoken. You may also have concerns that being a Programme Rep will be held against you by academics who assess your work.

Most staff respect and support programme representation, and don't expect you to know details of every issue. If you feel your ideas are not being listened to, ask for regular progress reports on issues you have raised. You could suggest having a regular agenda item for student feedback. You should NEVER be penalised in your academic work for being a Programme Rep. If you suspect this is the case please see the Students' Union immediately.

5. Feeling marginal or peripheral

Perhaps as a result of the above, you might feel nervous, segregated and not fully part of the committee. This can lead to feelings of uselessness, that matters are not relevant to you or other students, and it is a waste of time being there.

As a Programme Rep, you are a full member of the committee, and have as much right to offer input as anyone else. If you feel the content of the meetings is not relevant to other students then have a chat with the Chair afterwards. Programme Committees often discuss long-term strategic issues, whereas student may prefer to address more specific, immediate issues.

Always remember the Students' Union is the principal source of support in all circumstances. We are here to help you perform your role to your full potential.

The Terms of Reference for Programme Committees are provided in Appendix 2.

Olamide DANIA - BA (Hons) Education Studies

"I became a student rep because I wanted to familiarise myself with UEL and know that I was part of something that would help myself and other students. The people I met and the information I gained helped a lot because you get away from the academic aspects of university and you start recognising yourself and your potentials. Also, the Students' Union awards at the end of the year was awesome. Meeting people who are making an impact at university makes you realise your input does matter, so it encourages you to get involved more."

Overview of Training

Introduction to being a Programme Rep

This training gives you an insight as to what is involved with being a Programme Rep and how to consult the students you represent as well as how to voice their opinions.

The Skills & Development training

The Development training gives you an insight into time management, gathering quantitative and qualitative research to back up issues you raise in your programme committee as well as negotiating Skills.

Employability Training

This session gives you the opportunity to reflect on the transferable skills you developed during your time as a programme rep and how to demonstrate that to a potential employer.

Quality Learning and Teaching Training

The purpose of this session is to raise awareness of what good teaching is and how to make improvement for the students on your programme.

Mariam Hussain - Forensic Science and Human Biology

"I became a student programme rep was so that I could be more aware of what is happening around the university but also because I knew a lot of students had views that needed to be heard. Another reason is because it was something not related to my course, something different. Helping the student put their views forward and seeing what can be done to help them is one of the best things about being a Programme Rep. That and knowing we helped the university improve. Plus, I got the chance to improve on my leadership skills.."

Top Tip

"Talk to as many students on your course as you can because if you can befriend them they are more likely to share their views and problems with you."
